Artist Biography:

Trevor Ganske's recent work focuses on the architectural styles and their place in the American Southwest. His attachment to the arid landscape is explored through traditional techniques blended with the 21st-century terrain of the digital world. Using unconventional methods such as generative coding and laser-cutting, Ganske investigates delineations between artist and machine, natural beauty and manufactured perfection.

Born in Phoenix, Arizona in 1990, Trevor Ganske currently lives and works in Las Vegas, Nevada. He received a BFA in graphic design from Northern Arizona University in 2013, followed by a Master's Degree in Museum Studies from the University of Colorado at Boulder in 2019. Since professionalizing his art career in the Las Vegas area, he has participated in several local group exhibitions and included work in the 2021 juried Bullfrog Biennial exhibition at the Goldwell Open Air Museum. His work is housed in local and international private collections.
